How Beautiful Heaven Must Be

As I watched the snow fall outside my office window last week, I couldn't help but think how beautiful it was. Each flake seemed to be even whiter than the last. Then the snow turned into sleet. Each sleet pellet was as clear as crystal. As I began to think that nothing could be more beautiful than a snow blanketed ground, I began to think of how even more beautiful Heaven will be.

Through revelation from God, the Apostle John was allowed a glimpse into that great city. In Revelation chapter 21, John shared with us that besides being a place of comfort and peace, Heaven would be a place of unrivaled beauty. The city will be illuminated by the glory of God Himself. His light will shine like a jasper stone, being clear as crystal. The city itself is described as being built out of pure gold with massive walls constructed of jasper with foundations of every kind of precious jewel you can imagine. Each of the city's twelve gates was constructed out of a single pearl (that must have been twelve huge oysters). Even the streets where the inhabitants would travel were paved with pure gold.

Many feel that this description is symbolic and should not be taken literal. If that is the case it is probably because God knew that our limited minds would not be able to comprehend its real beauty. It will literally be indescribable.

I look forward to wintertime every year and the beauty of the occasional winter storm, but I simply can't wait until I can experience Heaven. Its beauty will surpass the prettiest of frozen precipitation any day. How about you? Do you long to see the beauty Heaven has to offer?

See ya at the House,
Greg
